Admiral Schley

has been ignored and really humiliated by the Administration, whilst Admiral Dewey, whose victory was no greater than that of Schley, is constantly praised and presented for extraordinary honor. Dewey is picked out to smother the indignation against McKinley, when the enormous loss of our yolunteers is made known. He is to accompany McKinley throughout the country, on a big parade, to shed some of Dewey's sunshine on that dark picture of American soldiers killed, in spite of their agreement to be dismissed immediately after peace with Spain was declared, and without any obligations on their part to fight for the conquest of the Philippines.

We hope, however, Admiral Dewey will not allow himself to be a catspaw for McKinley's crimes. For, whatever the result may be, we still consider that war against a foreign people-without any right or justice in it-a crime against mankind, the glorious history of this country, and the principles upon which we established our own Government in 1776.

Meeting of Irish-Americans,

At meetings of Irish-American publicans, held in the parlors he Ebbit House Monday and sday of this week, an organiauon was effected which has for its purpose organized political opposition to the doctrine of expansion and the retention of the Philippine Islands by the United States.

This movement was started by several Irish-Americans, including lish army which had been sent Col. Patrick O'Farrell, of this city. It is no credit to the Administration that the meeting had to be conducted behind closed doors, because of the presence of many Republican employes, whose positions would be jeopardized were it known that they had held opinions at variance with the policy of the Administration and had taken occasion to express them. Free speech seems to be no longer a prerogative of the American citi-

The task of drawing the Irish-American citizens into the party will devolve largely upon Colonel O'Farrell, who is one of the most enthusiastic members of the organization. Col. O'Farrell has always been a Republican, and before the existence of that party was an abolitionist. During the last Presidential campaign he was on the stump six or seven weeks in the interest of Mr. McKinley. Discussing the proposed organization, Cot. O'Farrell said:

"I have always been a Republi can, but I am unalterably opposed to this new doctrine of imperial ism. I believe we should confine ourselves to this continent and the islands contiguous."

Mr. O'Farrell will find many Democrats to stand with him on this proposition. It is an eminently sound one.

One of the President's Friends,

The case of Captain Carter, convicted by a court martial and senarmy, fined and imprisoned for robbing the Government of $3,ooo,ooo, has again been brought to the attention of the Attorney General. Ex-Senator Edmunds, who reviewed the case at the request of Secretary Alger, has come to the conclusion that Captain Carter may be dismissed under the evidence, but that the fine and imprisonment inflicted by the court should not stand, because the papers of the accused "were unlawfully used by the court." Carter stole the money, lined his pockets and those of the contractors who were favored by him with $3,000,000 of Government funds. and richly deserves dismissal, but his political and social influences are so strong that it would never do to send him to the penitentiary for five years. President McKinley has taken a personal interest in the notorious case, and he is responsible for the delay of eighteen months in carrying out the verdict of the court-martial,

Another Attempt to Steal the Trans-

It is announced that England is again on the eve of making another attempt to steal the little Republic of the Boers in South Africa. The comparative weakness of the Transvaal and the rich gold mines situated within its borders are, in England's opinion, good and sufficient reasons why the sturdy descendants of the Dutch, who were the first settlers in South Africa, should be deprived of their independence. The story of the treatment the Boers have received at the hands of the English shows how tyrannical John Bull can be when he is dealing with people who are not strong enough to place restraint on his rapacity. It is now 250 years since the forebears of the Boers were robbed of the colony they had planted in South Africa. After English rule was established the original settlers accepted the situation and tried to live the best they could under the English flag. The history of America, of Ireland, of India and every other land that at any time has come under English domination proves how arrogant and tyrannical the English can become when they have the whip handle. At last things came to such a pass in South Africa that the hardy descendants of the original Dutch settlers could stand it no longer, and they, therefore, determined to push farther into Africa to escape from English rule. It is now over sixty years since they carried out this resolve and settled in the Transvaal, which at the time was an unknown land to Europeans, puted possession of their new homes, so far as England was concerned, until late in the seventies. By that time the Transvaal had become of sufficient importance to excite England's cupidity. English troops were, therefore, sent nto the little South African Republic, under the pretense of safeguarding British interests against the native Africans, who had been waging war with the Boers. Having obtained a footing in the Transvaal, the English showed no disposition to retire, although the trouble with the native Africans had been settled. The Boers growing tired of this occupation rose in arms and defeated the Eugagainst them. They employed the only argument John Bull under stands and respects. The famous victory of Majuba Hill led up to the recognition, in 1884, of the practical independence of the Transvaal, under the suzerainty of the Eng-

The Boers were left in undis-

There was no disturbance in the little South African Republic until three years ago, when Dr. Jameson and a gang of freebooters made a raid upon it, with intention of annexing it outright to the British Empire. It is well known that Joseph Chamberlain and Cecil Rhodes were fully cognizant of Jameson's plans and heartily approved of them. The brave Boers, however, had not forgotten how to shoot. As at Majuba Hill, they gave the marauding English a warm welcome. Those of Jameson's freebooters who were not killed were captured and magnanimously handed over to the British government, although every man of them, under the laws of nations, had forfeited his life.

lish Queen.

Chamberlain failed in the attempt to steal the Transvaal, though the agency of Jameson had bided his time in the hope that something would turn up which would afford him an excuse for depriving the Boers of their independence. He has now found the desired excuse in the complaints of a lot of English carpetbaggers, who have settled in the Transvaal. and who consider it a grievous wrong because they are not altenced to be dismissed from the lowed to run things to suit them

The "understanding" which exists between the President of the greatest Republic of the world and the English Government has indirectly made it possible for Cham berlain to assume the role of bully toward the little republic over which Kruger presides, and practically rescues England from the isolation of a few years ago. It will be remembered when Jamison made his raid the Emperor of Germany sent a telegram to President Kruger congratulating him upon his success in beating off the marauders. England fussed and tumed over this telegram, but dared go no further. A few weeks before she had been told by this country that she would have to keep her hands off Venezuela or

York Evening Post from its London correspondent shows how this 'understanding' has in a round about way affected the Boers:

Having made friends with France and Germany in Africa and with Russia in China, England has isolated President Kruger from every possible friend, and freed her own hands for any possible

From this it will be seen that the first effect of England's escape from her isolation of three years ago is an attempt on her part to browbeat a little republic whose gold mines she covets, even as she coveted the rich mines of Venezu-

One Lesson of San Juan Hill. It was well for the National Guard of the State that Governor Roosevelt did not mince words in dealing with the poltroonery of the officers of the Seventy-first Regiment who kept so discreetly out of danger in the attack on San Juan Hill. That distressing incident at San Juan shows that the present system of selecting National Guard Officers is far from the best. The fact that a man is a "genial" and can cajole votes in an armory does not prove that he is the right sort of an officer to lead men into battle. A difficulty of the Guard has been that it has set more store by an officer's social standing than his knowledge of war and his ability to fight. In pointing out the perals to the service of the present method of selecting officers, the Governor has done a disagreeable duty in a very ins ructive way. What the National Guard wants are officers who know how to take care of their men as well in the field as in the camp; brave men, not cowards; fighters, not "handshakers." There is dissatisfaction in the ranks of the District National due, however, to a surplus of "handshakers" or "genials" or what may be termed "good fellows." The contrary seems to be the case. Whatever the cause, our overhauling, and in such overhauling it would be well to cut out all appointments due to social or busisole rule governing appointments. A Guard based on any other foundation will not stand the test.

The something unforeseen is not unlikely to be the claims of our citizens for damages sustained in Cuba under the Spanish rule, which by the treaty of Paris the United States agreed to pay. Twenty million dollars is a low estimate for these claims, and it now appears that large claims for damages incurred by British, German and French residents in Cuba during the recent insurrection will be pressed against the United States. They aggregate, it is estimated, fully $10,000,000.

Meanwhile our war expenses in the Philippines are certainly not growing less, and the lowest limit for the present appears to have been reached in Cuba and Porto Rico. The adamantine fact remains that the war taxes, passed for a specific purpose long since accomplished, are not only to stand permanently, but even with this addition to our revenues there is a great and continuing deficiency.

IF THE "insurrection" in the Phillippines is about to collapse why do the military authorities there exercise such a rigid censorship over dispatches from the islands? The dispatches thus censored differ very materially from advices received by mail via Hong Kong. The American people have a right to know the exact status of affairs there, and to withhold the facts from them is to practice deception.

Lewis Carroll's delightful fantasy, for the first time on the local stage at the Lafayette Opera House the week of May 22. It will be a joy to young and old alike to have this opportunity of beholding in animated form the impertinent March Hare, the courteous White Rabbit, the Spruce Lobster, the troublesome old Dodo, the Mad Hatter, the Frog Footman, the smiling Cheshire Cat, the scolding Duchess, and all those other queer celebrities of that realm of odd fancy. In the original production of this dramatization by Mr, De Wagstaff at the London Opera Comique, the animals were presented small in size as Alice, but they will now be enacted by a cast of professionals. Little Ruby, who danced before Queen Victoria at the age of three years, will be Alice, and Clifford Leigh, for whom Madeline Lucette Ryley is said to be especially writing a new play, will be the White Rabbit. The costumes are reproductions of Sir John Tenniel's beautiful designs The "Shuffle of the Cards," the "Lobster Quadrille," and the eccentric "Trial of the Tarts," with its wise jury of parrots, are among the features of the perform ance. 'A play of politics, love and orange blossoms in Louisiana," by Lee Arthur, author of "We'uns of Tennessee," now running in New York City, will be the Frawley Company's offering at the Columbia Theatre next week. The play is entirely new to the stage, and will receive its first presentation at the hands of a select cast, headed by the well known Washington actor, Mr. Charles B. Hanford, who proposes to star in the piece next season, if it comes up to his expectations. The author, Mr. Arthur, is an experienced actor, as well as a Guard, which does not seem to be playwright, and is here personally conducting the rehearsals. "Private John Allen" takes its name from a Louisiana politician, who earned his unique title in the Confederate army, but it is in no sense a war play, as the action takes place in 1880. It is in four acts, which District Guard seems to need an call for some elaborate stage settings, including a quaint scene outside Col. Nat Stone's livery stable, two rooms in John Allen's residence, and the court house, of Caddo Parish, where the play ness connections and let military is laid. Mr. Arthur is a native of Lou knowledge and experience be the islans, so it is sale to expect that the pictures he gives of life in the Bayou State will be truthful in every detail. while the characters will be types of Southern society.

"Way down East" is to be the Jubilee ficit of more than $100,000,000 at that means a week of enjoyment for Washington theatregoers, for the play The deficit at the last report was is one of the wholesome, homely kind which is truly told in a most charming expenditures during May and manner. Briefly, the tale may be by the regular villain, through a mock all but shattered. She becomes a sort engaged to a girl in the village As a by the father. Just as the lovemaking of the son and the companion is reaching a climax, the village busybody learns the farmer. He investigates just far enough to learn that there is some element of truth in the story, and then orders the girl to leave his house. It is night, and here is where is shown one of the most realistic bits of stagecraft seen in Washington for years. A terrific blizzard is blowing and the storm is seen as she opens the door to leave, dashing by in all its fury. As she leaves, she denounces her betrayer, who, by a strange coincidence, is visiting the tarmer. The son defies his parent and goes after the girl. He finds her in a snowdrift, and takes her to a neighbor's for shelter. Of course the larmer relents and goes out to look for his sou and the girl, and everything ends happily.
